Foreword

Biographical Museums are neither mausoleums, nor an attempt to ancestor worship or meant to show only our gratitude to the personalities who recidivated the greatness of our country. Such museums would perhaps be one of the most effective media, since it has an integrated role and appeals to both our emotions and intellects and brings the necessary confidence which is a great casualty today everywhere and at every place. In essence, it is an honest attempt on the part of a modern museum-man to perpetuate the teachings and philosophies of the great lives in a rational and scientific manner for an all-round and harmonious development of the human world. Such types of museums have a distinct role to develop the right attitude and approach to life, living and relations apart from the inspiration. The distinct potentiality that marks out the biographical museums is their capability to work for the upliftment of the fellow beings, both in developing their human character and broadening their education and culture. In times of moral degradation and absence of moral values in public life museums of such type of our country or the whole world will rescue us from our predicament. So such a museum on a noble people of our country or the whole world has great responsibilities in our community or public life.

The Gandhi Smarak Sangrahalaya for the eastern region came up at Barrackpore in the year 1961 and it was thrown open to the public on the 7th May, 1966. The objectives are to collect, preserve and display materials connected with the memory of the Mahatma, disseminate his life, thoughts, activities and programmes for the public benefit through different museum process.

The on-going pages try to reflect our endeavours to that extent, to project Mahatma Gandhi's life, activities, philosophy and programmes, highly comprehensive and varied, through different museum process— Seminars, Symposiums, Special Exhibitions, Participation in different Fairs and Institution of Award in his Memory, continuation of the experimental educational programmes and collaborative programmes with Gandhian Institutions and NGOs, etc. during the year 2014-15, i.e. from 1st April, 2014 to 31st March, 2015, to improve things that matter for a meaningful and peaceful existence, not excluding the environment. Mahatma Gandhi treated Nature also as his teacher.

We take this opportunity to offer our sincere thanks to our innumerable friends and admirers who extended their cooperation to carry on our task. We are aware we have to improve.

9. Programmes & Projects :

a) Environment Awareness Programme (31/07/2015) :

The state of environment and ecology is of much concern at present and so much that the United Nations Organization has thought it prudent to announce a World Environment Day from the 5th June, 1972. This is to remind us that our responsibility to work for removing the ecological imbalances and prevention of further depletion of natural resources. This will enable us to live in peace and tranquility.

Mahatma Gandhi had been a great lover of nature and the naturalists. Keeping in view these two postulates the Sangrahalaya organized a day-long Environment Awareness Programme with different educational institutions on the 31st July, 2014. Students from different schools participated along with their teachers and Dr. Swapan Sur, eminent Environmentalist and Shri Subhendu Kanjilal, reputed Social Activist talked at length on the necessity of proper preservation of nature. The total number of participants were ninety eight (98) including the students from six (6) schools, eleven (11) teachers and twenty (22) guardians. Dr. Swapan Sur made a presentation about birds to bring before us the role of animals and birds in the preservation of nature.
